Society Events.

Quite the most delightful affair of the season was the entertainment given Monday afternoon by Mrs. R. W. Luckey and Mrs. W. H. Bartlett, every feature of which, from the handsomely decorated parlors to the close of the dainty luncheon bespoke of the inventive originality of the charming hostesses. The east parlor, with the mantle banked in southern smilax and sweet peas, the piano almost buried in the same sweet blossoms, while graceful branches of our loved state flower, the cosmos, filled every niche and corner, was only rivaled by the south room with its gorgeous hangings of rare Navajo blankets and such a collection of Indian relics and pottery as but few possess. Nasturtiums and California peonies were the decorations used in the dining room. Eight tables played 42, Miss Walton being the lucky
